HIT HARD IN THE NINTH INNING

Slamming Out Three Three Base Hits Scoring Two Runs, Breaking a Tie and Saving Up the Game—Beaver Falls Play Here Today.

Stung again. Manager Alex J. Lawson celebrated his retirement as President of the West Penn League Tuesday by bumping Connellsville and jumping into first place, thanks to the kindness of nature in admitting another drubbing to Beaver Falls. The game yesterday was a hum-mer and promised for a while to go into extra innings. Three triples in the ninth by Butler, putting two runs, did the business and sewed up another victory for the Soap Minors.

Woodruff was on the rubber and was effective most of the time. Hite came at opportune times for the other fellows though and let in runs. Connellsville hit the ball to good advantage and played a much better game than the day before, but luck was with the visitors. Umpire Hanley officiated with general satisfaction. He unmired a good game. He did not deserve the criticism handed out by the fans and the demonstration against him at the end of the game by a number of irresponsible spectators was unwarranted. The scene was disgraceful and reflected little credit on the town.
Hanley's decisions on balls and strikes was a great improvement over Outgum's. In calling Birmingham's long hit to right a foul, deciding the same runner out at second when it looked as though the baseman missed the runner by several inches, and deciding Tiffany out when he slid into first, all of which occurred in the eighth and ninth innings, he laid himself open for criticism, for the plays were all close, and the decisions might have been given to the runners. His work was so much better than what has been handed out here lately the crowd should have been more considerate.

The only runs made by Connellsville came in the first inning on an error at short, hit batsman, sacrifice, long fly to middle and a single. Mathers and Hart scored, Birmingham getting the single.

Butler drew one in the fourth on a three bagger and a single another in the fifth on an error by Francis and two singles, and two in the ninth by slashing triples, one to right, another to left and the third to middle field.
None of the balls could have been handled by the outfield unless it was the one to left which Easler misjudged. It went farther than he expected.

The game was replete with fast fielding. Nagle and Huffnagle had three double plays, although on the third it looked as though Nagle trapped the hit instead of catching it on the fly. Woodruff and Tiffany had a double play. With the exception of the fourth and ninth innings Woodruff kept his hits scattered and pitched a steady game, good enough to have won under other circumstances. Har-kins kept the locals from hitting him to any great extent.

Manager Mularkew changed his team around a bit but there was little improvement over the old order. Francis was shifted to short, Mathers to middle while Shibe a new man, went into right. Shibe didn't do anything in the batting line, but handled the only chance he had in a clean manner. Following is the score:

DOMESTIC EXPENSES.

An Easy Way to Keep Track of Them.

Many a man who keeps a complete record of all his business transactions never thinks of doing the same thing when it comes to household expenses, and yet it's a very simple matter to maintain a personal checking account for this purpose. Paying by check is the simplest and easiest way to keep track of domestic expenditures, and The First National Bank of Connellsville will be glad to have your personal account, regardless of its size.

OHIOYLE.

Notes From the Little Mountain Resort Up the Yough.

OHIOYLE, May 15.—Word has been received here of the death of George Klink at the home of his parents, near Maple Summit, of typhoid fever. George accompanied his father, Joseph Klink, to Kansas last winter and after their return the young man was caught in a severe mountain storm and was chilled through the body. He never fully recovered from the effects of the storm, but gradually developed into typhoid fever, resulting in his death. George Klink was 17 years old. Besides his father and mother, Joseph and Rachel Klink, the deceased leaves three sisters, Mrs. George W. Long and Mrs. Zilba Burnworth of Nicolay, and Phoebe at home. George was an honest, industrious young man, respected by all who knew him. The funeral will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock, interment in the Maple Summit Cemetery.

The Borough Council have notified all persons to clean and pat their premises and alleys in sanitary condition within a few days.

From Westmoreland's County Seat.

GREENSBURG, May 14.—The Derry authorities cracked down hard last night when Harry Baldwin of South Greensburg gave a boxing exhibition there. His license was held up until he would promise that no knock-outs should occur. So the "go" between Mike Gannon, Baldwin's discoverer, and Al Martin, an old timer, was of mediocre interest. They went four rounds, and Martin, an old slugger, had the best of the argument. The next effort will be made at Latrobe.

An interesting case was tried before Judge Doty in criminal court yesterday. Antonio Peterson, charged larceny, was taken with felonious assault and battery. The two men worked together in a glass works, and the Pole alleged the Italian pushed him into a pit of glass. Only for the fact that the fire was out saved the Pole from death, he says. Tony claimed, however, that he fell into the pit, and that he rescued him. The defendant was acquitted and the costs placed upon the county. Milton Smith of Scottsdale, was acquitted of a charge of furnishing liquor to the 17 year old son of Joseph Queer of Scottsdale. The costs in this case were divided between the prosecutor and defendant.

An adjournment was taken last evening when the jury was deep in the case of Kline Overly and George Burkholder, charged by George McDowell, of the Ligonier Valley, with the larceny of chickens. McDowell claims he knew his chickens personally, and recognized eight in a bunch which the defendants had sold in Bolivar.

At the session of the Reformed Church in Irwin yesterday Rev. A. J. Heller of Connelville was named as a member of the Committee on Examinations and Licenses. Reports were read from each pastor in the Classis and these were very encouraging. Much progress is being made in mission congregations, and many new members are being taken into the fold.

At a meeting of the Westmoreland Hospital Board held last night plans for the building of another operating room were discussed. Unless Governor Stuart cuts down the State appropriation, this will be possible. It is badly needed. Council will be petitioned to pave streets adjacent to the hospital, so that the ambulance service can be made less painful to suffering patients.

ROCKWOOD.

Bright Paragraphs From the Big Somerset County Borough.

ROCKWOOD, May 15.—George W. Vogel, chief plumber for the Rockwood Supply House, this week moved his family and household goods from Friedens to this place and now occupies part of Charles N. Wolfersberger's double tenement house on Central Main street.

Miss Mary Crowe, who had been spending the past several months at Columbia, Pa., where her sister, Mrs. Emma Sloan, resides, has returned to town and is again staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller, where she has made her home ever since she was a child.

James Black, the well known fire insurance agent of Meyersdale, was in town yesterday looking after his business interests here and calling on his numerous friends.

Howard D. Critchfield, son of John M. Critchfield of Millford township, has gone to Johnstown, where he will be employed by the Cambria Steel Company in their mills at that place.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Landis have gone to Juniata, where they will visit friends and relatives for several days. Emory Younklin of this place was a business visitor in Connelville the first part of the week.

On the famous Pikes Peak Cog Railway in Colorado, the steep grades of the mountain necessitate the use of cog wheels to control the train, and vibration often so injures ordinary watches that an expert repairman must readjust them.

A conductor on the Pikes Peak road made a ninety-day test of the South Bend Watch last summer.

No adjustment of the watch was made for the whole period, but at the end of the test, examination showed a variation of less than one-half second per day. Do you think the watch you carry could stand a test like this?

South Bend Watches are sold only by reliable dealers everywhere.

THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM.

Much has been said at this session of the Legislature concerning the Initiative and Referendum. That the idea is attracting attention as a part of the plan of representative government is evidenced by the fact that a bill embodying its principles and making them applicable to certain conditions and questions was revised by no less person than the Honorable William Flinn of Pittsburg, an ex-convict but now a confessed reformer.

The Initiative and Referendum would undoubtedly be useful on occasions if it made it possible to permit the voters to express their will with binding effect on wobbly members of the lawmaking body; if, for example, it had been invoked to ascertain the will of the people concerning the bill requiring the publication of the laws the answer would have been so emphatic that the levy-loving members of the Legislature would not have dared to treat as a joke the demand for their enlightenment as to the rules of conduct they must observe under penalty of loss of property or of liberty.

Under the Initiative and Referendum, platform pledges could be submitted to the people for ratification, and once so declared to be the wishes of the people they would not likely be treated lightly. Platform pledges are what political leaders judge to be the popular sentiments of their particular party, but it does not follow that they accurately represent those sentiments, though for all practical purposes it may be so assumed. The use of the Initiative and Referendum in such cases would be more particularly for emphasis than for ascertainment, but it would enable each legislator to accurately gauge the sentiments of his constituents, not only as to platform pledges but also as to all other propositions, and for that reason alone it should be welcomed by him and them.

One of the principal objections to the Initiative and Referendum is the multiplicity of elections it would involve. The consensus of opinion is that we have too many elections and too frequent changes in election laws. The average voter is continually puzzling himself over the latter and being pestered by candidates of the former. Politics has become a mathematical science entirely too exact for the moral atmosphere, and many people think fewer elections will mean less corruption. This, however, is doubtful.

If all legislators were intelligent, dignified and conservative men, impressed with the importance of their positions and honest and patriotic in their desire to perform their duties, there would be no occasion for the Initiative and Referendum. We could reasonably expect more wisdom and justice from such a body than from the masses swayed by eloquent demagogues. The decadence of legislative character alone makes consideration of the Initiative and Referendum possible. Its employment will depend largely upon the future make-up of our lawmakers, and when it comes, if it ever does, it will not come from the legislative bodies of their own motion, but on demand of the people through their platforms, and the pledge will be one which cannot be ignored or laughed down.

THE TRICK NOT REPUBLICAN.

The afternoon organ of Allegheny county Democracy, the Pittsburg Sun, has on unusual amount of assurance on tap when it declares that the State Soldiers' Pension bill is a shamful attempt on the part of the Republican ring to bribe the old soldiers by "an unsought and unnecessary pension gratuity."

for the old veteran. They have for the most part always opposed the granting of pensions.
The present bill was launched in the Legislature by the Democratic feeling that its passage would embarrass the Republicans in the matter of appropriations, rendering it necessary for them to either refuse the request of the veteran or to pare down deserving charitable appropriations, thus putting the combatant party in for a large share of unpopularity in any event.
The Sun denounces the bill since it has passed; if it had failed, the Sun would have denounced the Republicans for having failed to enact it into a law. The Republican party has always been the soldier's friend and will continue to be so without being unjust and unreasonable to anybody.

TAKING A WHIRL AND KEEPING COOL.

A correspondent of the Uniontown Standard deplors the fact that "the able editor" of The Courier "has made a few whirled toward getting a little mixed in the primary contest."
The Courier's new whirled have not been in the direction of getting mixed in the primaries, but in the direction of emphatic protest against others mixing in them in a very unjust manner. The critical correspondent further avers that The Courier sees danger in the Democratic nominations. The gentleman had better read again and interpret more fairly. We are not alarmed at the Democratic candidates so much as we are at the persistent efforts of some Republicans to divide the party of Fayette county.

The Standard recognizes the danger just as well as we do. It says, "Let us forget, Judge, Sheriff and District Attorney are the only court house offices to be filled this year."
It is well enough to "keep cool," but when one sees an ascending trying to run fire to his house it is his duty to run him off the premises, not to sit in frozen dignity whispering to himself the comforting words, "Keep cool!" until it becomes too hot for comfort or safety.

The Uniontown Genius speaks of The Courier turning its political coat some years ago. That has always been a sore subject with the Genius. Speaking of political turncoats, however, prompts the query, What are the politics of The Genius under its new ownership? Does it always support Democratic candidates?

The green bug that is bulling the wheat market hasn't the slightest need of an appetizer.

The new laws are now being received at the office of the Prothonotary of Fayette county, where, we are told, "attorneys and officials" may see them. The Legislature evidently thinks the public may be damned.

The court house is no longer the center of attraction in Uniontown. Baseball and the circus have all but put Justice out of business.

Uniontown is to have a vaudeville theatre. Uniontown was ever a gay place.

There are sadder and sadder beds than the railroad tracks, yet the latter seem to have a fascination for some people.

The ruling of the Superior Court, that a judge does not have to give any opinion for the refusal of a liquor license, is not a new one; it is an affirmation of an old one, and the case was from Fayette county.

The poetry of the Uniontown Genius is almost as bad as some of its political arguments.

A movement to unseat Senator Crow is reported to have been decided in his favor. The work of the Legislature is relieved of the danger of being overruled, but some of the Senator's enemies in Fayette county will be considerably upset by the news.

A LIVELY MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL.

Finance Committee for a report at the next meeting," President Porter said. Attorney Brown said that by the borough audit a number of liens have never been collected. There is some trouble on Fayette street because cement instead of stone curbing was put in.

"Possibly," began Rev. Hinton, "if some of those collections are made we may have more than $2,000 to work on."

"I move we adjourn," called William McCormick. The motion was carried.

There will be a meeting next Tuesday evening. It is now eight but President Porter says Council laid off last week and "didn't do any good," so the meeting will be held, maybe.

BEHIND THE TIMES.

What would you think of a store that was away behind the times both in the kind of goods it offered for sale and its method of conducting business. You'd have a pretty poor opinion of it wouldn't you? Chances are that stranger, have just as poor an opinion of Connelleville and New Haven with an out of date toll bridge between the two towns. That is one reason why your own home merchants are working so hard for a free bridge. Like you they do not want strangers to think our towns are behind the times. Going to ask you to help us in this work some day soon and we expect you to be as much in earnest as we are.

BIDS WERE NOT OPENED

Burgess Objected at Scottdale as He had Not Been One Advertising.

TAX COLLECTOR'S FINE RECORD.

Has Got in All the Borough Tax for the Year 1906—A New Move Made in the Rutherford Matter—Other Notes of the Session.

SCOTSDALE, May 15.—Some of the highest class of bidders in Western Pennsylvania were represented at the meeting of Council held on Tuesday when bids were received for the construction of the Anderson run sewer. However, all the bids were returned to their makers unopened. Burgess William Ferguson appeared when Council convened, as it was expected to open the bids, but instead announced that under Ordinance 29 which is entitled "Providing that all contracts for paving and permanent improvements in the borough shall be let to the lowest responsible bidder," as he had not been instructed to advertise for the bidding he considered the advertisement of the Engineer and Secretary irregular and would not sanction it. The members of Council and the contractor present were somewhat amazed at the turn and a motion was passed that inasmuch as the Burgess raised an objection that all bids be declared off and the unopened bids be returned to the bidders. The contractors took the matter in good part and were assured that any alleged irregularity would be remedied and the bids be advertised for again.

A motion was then made that the Ordinance Committee consult with the Borough Solicitors regarding the preparation of repeals for any ordinances in which the duties of the Council and Burgess conflict in any manner. There are some ordinances still standing upon the books that were passed when the Chief Burgess held more power than later acts of Assembly confer upon him and these will be investigated and remedied by the attorneys.

Tax Collector S. M. McMillan set a record for Scottdale and all the boroughs around when he reported that he had collected all the borough tax charged against him on the duplicate for 1906, and showed Treasurer C. H. Elcher's receipt for the last money due the borough on the taxes, $92.40. Collector McMillan has also settled in full for his county tax. The taxpayers of Scottdale are prompt and are looked after carefully that they know of their indebtedness. Mr. McMillan will now devote his time to clearing up the school duplicate for the year. Just when the new duplicate will be out is unknown as yet, as it will be very late this year.

Chairman P. J. O'Connor of the Special Investigating Committee reported verbally on the voluntary non suit which the borough took in its case against former Secretary E. L. Rutherford last week. The Borough Attorneys had prepared a motion that Mr. Rutherford be notified by Council to make an accounting to it for the years he was Secretary from 1892 to March, 1906, both years inclusive, as provided for in Section 12 of the Act of Assembly approved April 1, 1894. It was on this point the failure of Councils to demand an accounting instead of asking him to pay the sum alleged by the borough to be due, that Judge McConnell ruled against the borough. As the borough took a voluntary non suit this will bring the matter in shape, the attorneys assert, to bring another suit along regular lines. The motion passed.

The Finance Committee reported favorably on the allowing of $40 to the G. A. R. to assist in defraying the expenses of the observance of Memorial Day. This has been the custom in the past and the present Legislature passed an Act at this session giving such right to boroughs.

A motion was passed that Council meet hereafter in the room on the second floor immediately above the Council chamber. There was a large attendance of the Council present, only two being absent, C. J. Shaffer and A. E. Collins, who were both at work. Those present were D. C. Baker, L. R. Elcher, R. F. Ellis, J. C. Horne, H. G. Martz, P. J. O'Connor, T. W. Porter, J. G. Tedrow, O. S. Weaver and President A. P. Byrne.

Matthew Stolz of Everson, a blacksmith at the H. C. Frick Coke Company car shops, was seriously injured in a peculiar manner on Tuesday afternoon. He was pulling on a wrench, which slipped and he fell with great violence against an anvil, which caused severe and dangerous injury to his side. He was removed to his home.

Mrs. J. M. Dinsmore and Mrs. H. W. Maratta of Pittsburg are visiting Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Millen. The former is a sister of Mrs. Millen and the latter a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Millen.

The Grand Army Post has appealed to the school children of Scottdale for a donation of flowers and potted plants to use in the decoration of the graves of the departed veterans in the celebration of Memorial Day. The children are to bring the plants and flowers to the teachers on the day before Memorial Day and the plants and flowers will be gathered up at noon. This was done last year and a wagon load of flowers was secured.

C. S. Nelson, the Walk-Over shoe man, has announced a shoe style showing at his remodeled store on Pittsburg street to which everyone is invited on Friday evening. The new store is said to be the handsomest outside of Pittsburg.

DROPPED DEAD.

Well Known Somerset Man Dies on Church Steps Yesterday.

SOMERSET, May 14.—About noon today Simon Berkoy, a well known resident of this place, died suddenly from heart failure while resting on the steps of the Christian Church after performing his usual morning work as sexton of that church. Mr. Berkoy was well known and highly respected by all who knew him. He had been in delicate health for several years, his ill health dating from an attack of pneumonia. He had been sexton of the Christian Church about 8 years and has performed the duties well and in a satisfactory manner. He was a carpenter by trade. He is survived by his wife, whose maiden name was Dora Hout, and by one daughter, Nora, wife of Edward Barnett, a well known merchant of this place. The body was taken to the home of the deceased on Patriot street. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. Deceased was about 48 years of age, was a member of the Christian Church and will be a loss to the community.

In civil court Judge Holt of Beaver county is assisting Judge Kooser in disposing of a list of 25 cases, a large majority of them being appeals from the decisions of Justices of the Peace. About half of the cases were disposed of by settlement or continuance and the remaining 11 are for trial. The case on trial at present before Judge Holt is that of M. L. Bowman vs. W. W. Dempsey, the plaintiff being represented by Attorneys Hay & Hay and the defendant by Attorneys Koonz & Ogilvie. The facts in the case are that a quantity of timber was cut, that Bowman alleges that Dempsey had no right to cut the timber and that a suit in trespass was instituted. The case will likely be concluded this afternoon.

Judge Kooser is hearing the case of John Lemon Davis vs. Dr. John W. Hawes, both residents of Paint borough. The plaintiff is represented by Rufus E. Meyers, L. O. Kooser and Norman T. Boose and the defendant by William H. Ruppel. The facts in the case as brought out in the testimony are that Davis sustained the fracture of his left leg below the knee and the ankle. He secured the services of Dr. Hawes who set the limb and treated it, finally placing it in a plaster cast. When the fracture finally united Davis discovered that the limb which had been broken was about three inches shorter than his other leg. A suit for damages resulted. The fracture occurred about three years ago and the suit was brought at that time but has not come up for trial until this term of court. It is likely that this case will be concluded this afternoon.

The.... Rogue's March.

By
E. W. HORNING,

Author of "Raffles,
the Amateur Cracksman," "Sluggers,"
Etc.

Copyright, 1904, by CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS.

"Dr. Sullivan, this one's father." He had a father, then? Mr. Nat had never mentioned him. And the old man was worse to do with than the son?

Tom put these questions to himself and then another to his friend the barman, after shortly telling the latter about the behavior of the iron gang.
"Why was all that?" said Tom.

"Why? Because half them crows have worked for the Sullivans in their time. They get you flogged and flogged out of you; then they get you six months in the crawlers, and like as not that's the end of you."

"Why doesn't somebody put a bullet through them both?"

"Because the crows have got the puck. That's their secret. They don't know what fear is. So there's seventy strong men up there and over a hundred in harvest time, and the whole boiling afraid of them two!"

Tom said no more; neither did he have much to say to Mr. Nat next day in their saddles. Neither did Mr. Nat have anything at all to say to him before nightfall, so never had been his latest "touch of the sun," but toward evening they left the road, and as the moon was rising in a velvet sky lights also broke upon them through some trees. Dogs innumerable began to bark, and as young Sullivan stooped to open a gate he pointed across it to the lights and said that there was Castle Sullivan at last.

"And back you here," he added sarcasm, seeing Tom's bridle on the other side, as though every redeeming trait was now left behind upon the admiral ground that they had traversed together, "back you to this and recollect it well! You've been right enough on the way, and you've been making of a decent groom, but you won't find me as easy up here as I could afford to be down the road, and one word about that sunstroke!"

He glared at Ericsson, then let the bridle go without flushing his threat, and without another syllable they rode through the trees toward the lights.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE new groom rubbed his eyes in the moonlight. He could have laughed aloud. English castles he had seen, Irish castles he had heard about, but what was this? A jumble of slab huts on the right, and facing these a wooden, one storied rectangular eyecore—three sides house, the fourth a formidable palisade, and in their midst an arid courtyard overlooked by French windows and glass doors. No creeper clung to the whitened walls. No shrub softened the rigid angles of the yard, and the veranda was too shallow for real shade.
Yet the site had been chosen on a ridge of red gum that had been left unfelled beyond the palisade and rustled restfully above the slab huts opposite, rendering the latter the more inviting quarters of the two.

"The fliers dismounted at a gate in the palisade, and as young Sullivan led the way into the courtyard a tall, beet figure in a frocked coat and a plaited straw hat stepped down from the veranda and stood still.

"What's this?" cried an arrogant and aged voice. "Only one, eh? What have you done with the other two?"
"Couldn't get them, sir," responded Mr. Nat in a tone quite new to Tom.
It was a very model of filial respect and dutiful subservience.

"Couldn't get them, sir? Why, what d'ye mean?" the old man thundered.
"We applied for two laborers and a groom. Why couldn't you get them?"

"The fact is I did," stammered Nat,
"only two out of the three were hopeless cases. In the last stages of—"

"Pathetic!" cried Dr. Sullivan, who was an old army surgeon and the bug-bear of sick convicts and malingering soldiers.

"That was it, sir—the very word the doctor used when I made him overhaul them. He said it was no use my taking them, as they'd certainly die on our hands."

"Humph! He may have been right, but I'd trust a convict to sham death itself—with anybody but me," said the old gentleman, looking hard at Tom.
"I wish I'd seen them myself. However, I'll take his word and yours and complain to the assignment board."

"I've done all that, sir," hurriedly interrupted the son. "I stayed the week out doing nothing but complain. They'll remember me. I promise you. I'll never happen again to us. Then at the end of the week I couldn't resist another Sunday, and you wouldn't grudge it me, father, if you'd heard the sermon I heard in St. Philip's church morning and evening. I must tell you about it later on."

"You must, you must. No; I don't fudge you that, my boy, heaven knows," said the old man, mollified in a moment. He took a banister cane from under his arm and rapped Tom smartly across the shoulders. "And what of this rascal?" he added.

"What's he good for?"

"Groom."

"Can the ruffian ride?"

"Not so badly."

"Understands horses, does he, and has behaved himself on the way?"

"Yes, or the whole, very well."

"Then let him take them round to the stable and come back here for his supper. He may have it in the kitchen tonight; only recollect, you convict, that if you misbehave either there or anywhere else on Castle Sullivan you'll smart for it pretty quick and pretty heavy. Recollect that. You're here as a convicted felon, not a free man, and I don't care what you've done to get here. Whatever it was, the punishment for it is scandalously light. But the punishment for anything you do unless on my estate shall be all the heavier on that account. So now you know.

And don't you say you hadn't a fair warning at the start."

With this Dr. Sullivan shook his cane in the new groom's face and called him overseer, for whom he had directions to which Tom did not listen. He was more interested in a lighted door on the right, where stood a female on the threshold of what he conceived to be the kitchen and whether Mr. Nat himself had thrown furtive glances. But now father and son went indoors arm in arm. The overseer came up, a gruff man with flaming whiskers, and Tom caught him also looking wistfully toward the lighted door before he was bidden to "come this way."

So he followed the fiery whiskers to the stables, a long log building some little distance beyond the house, and here Tom was so smart in unsaddling and so quick to find chaff bin and out sack and saddle room that his early companion was moved to rude advances.

"You're pretty handy," he growled.
"Been a groom before?"

"Only since we left Sydney."

"Well, you're in luck too. The groom here has a room to himself next the saddle room. Come and I'll show it you."

The room in question was very small and squalid, with a fixed bunk and a foul palisade, but Tom thought it would be delightful with nice clean straw, and to be alone at nights was to compass an unexpected and unspeakable luxury. Ginger whiskers pointed out the other convicts' quarters on their way back to the house. They were the slab bunks opposite the palisade. Two were large, the others all small. That was the overseer's but with the big chimney and the little veranda.

"And who's the overseer?" inquired Tom. "Mr. Nat?"

"No, I am, and hark'ee, my beauty, here we are at the kitchen, Irish castles we'll see up yonder, ain't you? But no games with the girl or there'll be trouble in you go. You'll thank me for the warning when you've seen a bit."

Tom thanked him then and there and was in the kitchen next morning.
It was empty, but from the adjoining

"You're here as a convicted felon, not a free man."

scullery there came a sound of scuffles, followed by a crash which arrested Tom's steps. Spurs then jingled out of the scullery by an outer door, and in the inner one stood a fine young woman, with black hair disheveled, and a broken piece of crockery in either hand.

"An' me to pay for it!" Tom had heard her mutter, but to the doorway she stood without a word, her steel gray eyes upon him till he colored, when she flung the broken pieces on to the dresser and clapped her hands.

The first blush ever seen at Castle Sullivan!" cried she. "An' is it the new groom you are? Shake hands, then, and make friends with the cook. I'm Peggy O'Brien, my name is, so now tell me yours and all yer blather, while I got ye as good a meal as ye can hound."

So he told her his name, but nothing more, and she looked at him closely as she told the cloth. "Sure, it's a special he is!" she murmured. "Poor man, I might have seen it wild half an eye."
And she sighed and clicked her tongue as she put meat and bread upon the board; then looked at him wistfully and long with her clear, bright eyes, for he had rested his elbows on the table and had hidden his face, touched to the heart by the womanly kindness of her voice. He had heard nothing like it since that fatal night in April, now eight long months ago, nor when he looked up, had he seen anything from that night to this like the womanly compassion in those Irish eyes.

She cut him some mutton and a slice of bread. She put the knife and fork in his hands, but he made no use of them.

"Ah, now, pluck up!" she coaxed.
"Pluck up, ah, now!"

He made an effort, but could not finish what was on his plate.

"Your kindness has taken away my appetite, Peggy," he said with a smile as he pushed back his chair. "It's the first I've had, from a woman, at all events, for many's the long month."

With that he rose to go, but she got between him and the door.
"Glory be to God, an' it shan't be the last!" said she, her bosom heaving and a tear in her eye. "Peggy's your friend, remember that, and it's the cook can be the usefulness of to the assigned servants. If you'd only say out what it is that's troubling ye so this minute!"

"Coming up here as a convict, that's all, Peggy."

"There's hundreds more in thim huts forlorn ye."

"That's no comfort, I'm afraid. You see, I am very selfish, I think only of myself."

"But they're all convicts here. Every mother's son but the could care and Mr. Nat."

"What the overseer too?"

"Ginger? It's Ginger we call 'em, an' a decent man at most times is Ginger, though you needn't be tellin' 'im I said so. But, faith, he's no better than the rest of us. If he isn't a convict now he was a convict then, an' it's every wan of us'll be that soon, if we live long enough."

"Yes? Don't 'lar me, Peggy. Call me Tom. I'm not even like Ginger, you know. I'm a convict of the deepest and the next day."

"An' what am I?"

"Not you, too, Peggy?"

"Me, too, Tom, an' it's seven year I'm here for. So don't you make such a song of it, me dear, or it's me you'll be puttin' to the blush!"

Tadpole had done so already. And, to believe Peggy, the second blush ever seen at Castle Sullivan was still mantling her pleasant face, when spurs jingled again in the scullery, and Mr. Nat stood on the inner threshold.
Some moments he stood there without a word, a furious glitter in his cold blue eye, his lewd mouth showing through his beard like a gasp. Peggy shrank back. Tom was wondering if the brute had ever struck her, when he was addressed in a voice that shook with ill-governed ferocity.

"What are you doing here, Ericsson?" were the words.

"I have just had my supper. I was told to have it here."

"Oh, you've had it, have you? Then why the devil haven't you cleared out?" roared young Sullivan, losing all control.

"I tell you what, Peggy, this man's a cold blooded murderer. That's what he is, and that's what he's here for. Why didn't I hang him? God knows, but they didn't, so we've got the benefit instead. Let me never catch him in here again. He'd cut your throat as soon as look at you. Clear out, you gallowas bird, and show your nose inside the palisade again if you dare!"

Tom replied with his eye, and only scorn was in its steady gaze. When the other ceased, he waited a little to ascertain if that were all, "then he turned upon his heel, opened the door, walked out and shut it very quietly behind him."

There were high voices in the kitchen as he went. And Tom, who himself was less cool when he reached his room, where, indeed, he lay awake half the night still wondering whether Dr. Sullivan had ever struck Peggy O'Brien, and whether Peggy would admit it if he had. But in the end he slept soundly on the clean straw with which he first took care to line his bunk.

Suddenly, but not long, for in the middle of the night, as it seemed to Tom, the clanging of a great bell brought him to his feet in a state of high alarm.
He slid into his trousers and rushed out. It was that black hour before dawn, and at first in the falling starlight he could see nobody; then he described a figure in a long coat prailing to and fro before the huts, but the bell was silent, though still awaying, from the twisted arm of a signpost: gum tree, when Tom ran up and inquired of this man what it meant. He found he was speaking to the night watchman, who said his business was to ring the bell first an hour before sunrise, then half an hour later and lastly when the sun appeared.

"So you're to be groom?" added the watchman. "I wouldn't swap my job for yours."

"Not?" said Tom.

"Not? Cause why? I'm on all night, but off all day, an' I see less of the coves than any other blessed man on the place. Now you'll see more of 'em, and Lord help you if you trot out a lame ung or a piece of harness the old cove can't see his ugly mug in! I wouldn't be in your shirt for something; it'll be stickin' to your back by this day week!"

Tom was returning to his room when a sash was softly raised in the main building, and there was Peggy at an outer window in an inkly shower bath of pitch black hair. She beckoned him with her finger, but transferred it swiftly to her lips.

"You did well! You did well!" she whispered. "I was in the holy terror lest you answered Mr. Nat. If you'd done that!"

She shuddered and shut her lips.

"Well, what if I had?" said Tom, begunning to feel some to be had out.

"Never ask me!" she returned. "Only bear in mind that what they'll call 'im solomon is a crime out here. Give 'em check, an' it's twenty-five or fifty an' now I've told ye. This will ye be told know. There's some poor fellow here here gets it every Monday as I've it But you mustn't; so never check 'em.
me dear, and never come near me kitchen any more. Sure it'd be the dith of a young gentleman like you."

"Would it?" said Tom. "Well, never you fear, Peggy! I'm not such a fool

"They may be after makin' one, Tom, dear. Faith an' they'd have one ready made if they cut ye here! There's the second bell. For God's sake be off —and remember Peggy's words."

"I'll go when I'm ready, Peggy, not until, and don't shut down that window or I'll take off my fingers.
Your hand again! It's to you I shall owe my whole skin!"

He gave her his hand. She took it between both of hers and pressed it with a fervor that should have given him another warning on the spot. But her kind voice only put him in mind of Clara so far away; nor did he hear it again for some few days. Now and then she would wave to him from the kitchen window, but it was always to wave him back. More often he waved to her from the stable door, but she invariably shook her black head at him with the greatest vigor.

Meanwhile her words came true.

UP TO THE GOVERNOR.

Senate Concurs in the House Amendments to Old Soldiers' Pension Bill.

STATE HAS AMPLE REVENUES

So Declares Senator Cochran, Author of the Measure, in Advocating Favorable Action—Anti-Bucket Shop Bill Passes Finally in Senate.

Harrisburg, May 15.—After a long debate the senate concurred in the house amendments to the Soldiers' pension bill and the measure now goes to the governor. The bill carries nearly $6,000,000, and pensions Pennsylvania soldiers of the Civil war from $5 to $10 a month, according to their term of service. As it originally passed the senate the bill contemplated an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the payment of pensions the next two years. When the bill went to the house it was amended so as to carry an appropriation of nearly $5,000,000. Senator Cochran, in moving the adoption of the house amendments, said he thought $1,000,000 would be sufficient for the first year and that not more than $2,000,000 would be required in any two years.

"The state has ample revenue and does not need new revenue raisers," Mr. Cochran added. "I don't believe the governor is going to cut out the charities to pay these pensions, they are too important. We might cut $1,000,000 off the appropriations for good roads and reduce the school appropriation. The balance can easily be raised by local taxation."

Tuesday's Session Bill. Several senators suggested that the bill be referred to a conference committee to which Mr. Cochran objected. He pledged his word that if the bill passed he would ask the governor to cut the appropriation to $2,000,000. He was authorized by the old soldiers to say that they would make a similar request of the governor.

The amendments were then concurred in by a vote of 39 to 10. Those voting in the negative were Messrs. Brown, McMillen, McNichol, Miller (Bedford), Phillips, Roberts, Sisson, Tustle, Walton and Woods.

The anti-bucket shop bill passed the senate by a vote of 38 to 1. The bill now goes to the governor.

The senate judiciary general committee reported the nomination of James Pollock, harbor master of Philadelphia, with a negative recommendation. He was appointed by Governor Pennypacker and his appointment has been "held up" by the committee since the opening of the session. The action of the committee deprives Mr. Pollock of his office unless the senate rejects the report, which is doubtful.

Mr. Garner of Schuylkill called up in the house his resolution to extend the date of final adjournment until May 28. Mr. Rhey of Philadelphia moved to lay the resolution on the table. The motion was lost.

Speaker McClain Explains. Speaker McClain then made a "statement of fact without wishing to influence any votes on this resolution." He said one week was too short a time, because the many hundred bills now in the hands of the governor, all of which he now has until June 16 to consider, would have to be recalled because it would be impossible for the governor to act upon them within the 10-day limit.

After further debate Mr. Garner withdrew his resolution.

All house bills have been dropped from the calendar.

The Duncanson railroad commission bill as amended by the senate railroad committee passed finally in the senate by a vote of 37 to 2. The bill goes into a conference committee to be amended to suit Governor Stuart, who was opposed to it as originally amended. Should the report of this committee be adopted the bill will go to the governor for his action.

Governor Stuart has signed the bill appropriating $600,000 for the establishment and maintenance of sanitariums for consumptives. The work is to be under the department of health, and the sanitariums may be located in forestry reservations.

The employers' liability bill was restored to the original form in which it was sent to the senate from the house on motion of Mr. Blewitt of Lackawanna and passed second reading.

Governor Stuart sent the following nominations to the senate:

Isadore Coblenz, Allegheny; Charles W. Houston, Pittsburgh; A. J. Happer, Washington; John M. Buchanan, Beaver; John F. Budke, Canonsburg; Edward McDonald, McDonald; Edwin S. Weyand, Beaver; and Richard R. Quay, Sewickley, to be managers of the Morgantown Reform school.

John W. Schall of Norristown to be brigadier general of the National guard for the term of five years to compute from May 19, 1904.

John A. Wiley of Franklin to be a brigadier general of the National guard for the term of five years to compute from November 30, 1905.

H. A. Swan to be a justice of the peace for the borough of Coalport, Clearfield county.

IN RUNAWAY.

Mrs. Herbert Knox and Miss Eleanor Singer Have Narrow Escape.

In an exciting runaway on Pittsburg street about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Herbert Knox and Miss Eleanor Singer were thrown from a buggy and painfully injured, while an Italian driver was dumped to the sidewalk, sustaining a cut and bruised head. Mrs. Knox and Miss Singer were driving north on Pittsburg street when at the Pennsylvania railroad crossing the shafts of the buggy broke. The horse made a wild dash, running the vehicle into an awning post in front of W. R. Scott's store. Both ladies were thrown into the air, landing with sickening thuds on the concrete sidewalk. Mrs. Knox was senseless for several minutes, while Miss Singer was slightly dazed. Both are able to be around today.

The horse broke from the buggy when the collision occurred. It turned down Penn street, running at a rapid gait, and collided with a wagon of the Pittsburg Brewing Company. The driver was tossed out and landed in a pile of mud. His scalp was slightly cut and bruised.

Excitement was high for a while until it was learned that no fatalities had occurred. The buggy and awning post were badly damaged. Mrs. Knox was taken into the Arlington Hotel but soon revived sufficiently to walk home. No physicians were needed.

MARRIED IN PITTSBURGH.

Pleasant, were married Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride on North Long avenue, Pittsburg, Rev. William L. McEwan, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church, officiating. Only the immediate relatives and a few of the intimate friends witnessed the ceremony. After September 1 the young couple will be at home in Greensburg.

AFTER HARRIMAN.

Interstate Commerce Commission Report Is Most Sensational.

Publishers' Press Telegram.

NEW YORK, May 15.—An extract of the Interstate Commerce Commission finding on its investigation of the Harriman railroad combination is published today in the Evening Telegram which states that the report is by far the most sensational ever put out. The Commission has found that railroad competition has been choked off entirely in an area equal to one-third the United States; that in this area Harriman is absolute master; that his controls are in violation of the anti-trust laws, and recommends that the Attorney General proceed against him.

The report of the Commission will be in the hands of Attorney General Bonaparte within a few days and in view of the well known attitude of the Administration toward the Harriman combination no doubt is entertained but that a series of great suits will be instituted in the immediate future to dissolve the different agreements and contracts made by Harriman.

BACK TO TEXAS

Must President H. Clay Pierce Go to Answer a Charge of Perjury Against Him.

Publishers' Press Telegram.

ST. LOUIS, May 15.—H. Clay Pierce, President of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, must return to Texas to answer to a charge of perjury. Federal Judge Adams refused a writ of habeas corpus today and considered the prisoner remanded to the custody of the police.

He will be turned over to Sheriff Matthews at once and be taken back to Texas tonight.
